

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A system including a data network and a Wireless Application Protocol (WAP) gateway for providing network content to wireless terminals allows a user of a wireless terminal to designate another network node as a destination for network content, and to selectively route network content to the designated network node. The designated network node may have capabilities not found in the wireless terminal, such as hard-copy printing or permanent retention.